Sindh Being Subjected to Injustice in Power Supply: CM Murad

JAMSHORO: Sindh Chief Minister Murad Ali Shah has voiced concerns over the perceived injustice in the province's power supply, despite Sindh contributing significantly to the national grid. Speaking to the media, Shah highlighted that Sindh provides 3,000 megawatts of cheaper electricity generated in Thar, yet its residents suffer from severe power shortages, especially in the scorching heat.

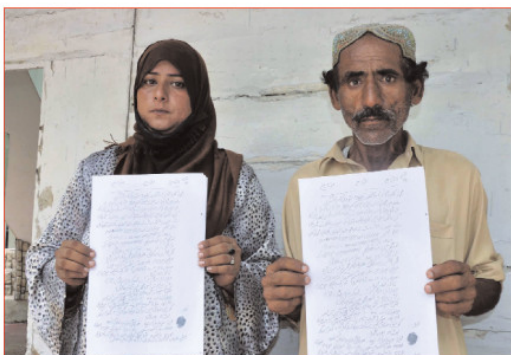

"Sindh's people are suffering most in this hot weather, and we are making every effort to provide relief," the Chief Minister stated. He also mentioned that Bilawal Bhutto has raised this critical issue in the National Assembly, seeking redress. Addressing other matters, Shah dismissed the possibility of further changes in the Sindh cabinet. He also praised the Sindh Police for their major success in recovering abducted trader Nareesh Kumar, attributing the success to the implementation of smart city systems. "The recovery of Nareesh Kumar is a success of the smart city system," he noted, announcing plans to install these systems in all divisional headquarters, including Karachi and Hyderabad. Commenting on political developments, Shah criticized the past approach of the Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf (PTI), stating that their policies of issuing threats had caused damage to the party. "Those who believe in democracy engage in dialogue on political matters," he said. He welcomed the Prime Minister's invitation to PTI to attend the All Parties Conference (APC), calling it a positive step towards unity. "We all are victims of terrorism, and we must join hands to eliminate it," he added. Murad Ali Shah's remarks underscore the ongoing challenges faced by Sindh in terms of power supply and governance, while also highlighting efforts to improve security and political cooperation in the province.—RT

Andy Murray's Wimbledon career over after Emma Raducanu withdraws from doubles

Andy Murray's Wimbledon career ended following Emma Raducanu's withdrawal from their scheduled mixed doubles match.

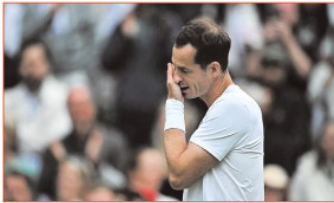

The 37-year-old former world number one was set to partner with his compatriot on Saturday evening at the All England Club.

Raducanu cited "some stiffness" in her right wrist as the reason for her decision.

The 21-year-old progressed to the fourth round of the women's singles with a commanding two-set victory over Greek ninth seed Maria Sakkari on Friday.

"I have decided to make the very tough decision to withdraw from the mixed doubles," she said.

"I'm disappointed as I was really looking forward to playing with Andy but I've got to take care."

Murray, a two-time singles champion, was competing at Wimbledon for the final time before retiring later this year.

The Scot made his last SW19 appearance on Thursday, when he suffered as 7-6(6), 6-4 defeat in the 2024 Wimbledon men's doubles alongside brother Jamie to John Peers and Rinky Hijikata.

After his defeat in men's doubles, the 37-year-old legend was honoured by Wimbledon where a montage consisting of his legendary career was shown on the big screen. Names like Roger Federer, Rafael Nadal, Novak Djokovic and others appeared in the video capturing the 37-year-old's memorable time on the court.

"It wasn't something that I'd asked for," said Murray. "When I was making the decision around the singles, the club spoke to me and said they would like to do something after one of my matches here. I think if I'd played singles, then would do it after I potentially lost in the singles.

If the singles doesn't happen, we'd like to have it after the first doubles match, regardless of the result.—Agency

Jimmy Connors backs Novak Djokovic to win Wimbledon

Eight-time Grand Slam winner Jimmy Connors is backing Novak Djokovic to win Wimbledon 2024 despite just returning from knee surgery a month ago.

Djokovic began his Wimbledon 2024 campaign on a high note as he managed to beat Vit Koprieva and Jacob Fearnley in his first two matches and will now take on Alexei Popyrin in the third round on Saturday.

The Serb has been ranked the third-best player in the tournament by experts, behind Carlos Alcaraz and Janik Sinner but according to the Connors, if Djokovic is fit, he can be the absolute favourite.

"You got to look at 'Djoker'. He may be the third favourite, but he has won the tournament seven times," Wimbledon said.

"If he's healthy and feeling good, then why wouldn't he be right up there as the favourite? Sure, he's had a tough season so far, but champions like Djokovic thrive under pressure. Wimbledon could be his stage to turn it all around."

"Djokovic has this incredible knack for wearing down his opponents. His movement on the court is like no other, and his stamina is second to none."

Connors also declared Alcaraz the biggest threat to the Serb and also added that Sinner will have some additional pressure as he is the world No. 1.

"Alcaraz has that fearless spirit and, having already won a Major, he knows what it takes to perform on the big stage," Connors continued.

"Sinner has had tough outings against Djokovic in the past. Facing Djokovic at Wimbledon, where his game shines brightest, is a different challenge altogether.—Agency

Cristiano Ronaldo consoles visibly distraught Pepe after Euro 2024 exit

Cristiano Ronaldo was seen offering a shoulder to his teammate Pepe to cry on after their team was kicked out of the Euro 2024 on Friday following a 3-3 defeat from France in their quarter-final clash.

This was potentially the last international tournament for the 41-year-old Portuguese defender who has been crying uncontrollably on the field after France sealed a dramatic shootout win against Portugal in Hamburg.

With the latest defeat, the future of Ronaldo, who marked his record sixth European Championship this year, hangs in balance as he is yet to decide whether he will continue playing for his national side, Goal reported.

Portugal's 39-year-old captain previously said that Euro 2024 would be his last European competition with the national side but it is still uncertain whether he had played his last match with Portugal or not.

After the defeat, Portugal's head coach Roberto Martinez opened up on Ronaldo's future, saying that it is "too soon" to say if the star footballer is retiring from international football or not.

"It's too soon and raw after the match to talk about that and there have been no individual decisions made," Martinez said at a news conference when asked if it had been Ronaldo's last game in a Portugal jersey.

Ronaldo ended his Euro 2024 campaign without scoring a single goal and that was the first time in his 20-year career that he failed to score in an international tournament. The former Real Madrid and Manchester United star will be 41 years old when the 2026 World Cup begins in the United States, Canada and Mexico and whether he will represent Portugal there or not is still a question. It is worth mentioning that Ronaldo won Euro 2016 after Portugal beat France in the final with Eder scoring the only goal during the extra time, marking Portugal's first-ever major trophy.—Agency

How filling in for father's role made Mathira stronger than any man

In a recent interview with a local channel, television host, model, and mother-of-three Mathira opened up about the pressures and traumas she faced while navigating life as a single parent after her divorce in 2018. She shed light on the strength she found in her children.

Mathira expressed that her three sons have been her greatest source of support, describing how she had to adopt both maternal and paternal roles in their upbringing. She explained, "When the relationship with the father fizzles out completely it's up to the mother to take on the man's role. To be a man, for a woman that's not her job. But when she becomes a man, she becomes stronger than a man."

The model also highlighted the double standards present in society, pointing out the stark differences in how single mothers and fathers are perceived. "When a single mother does something instead of praising her, they wonder how many others were behind the scenes helping her. When a man does something good, we appreciate him, but when a woman is running a household, there are too many accusations against her," said Mathira. She poignantly added, "It gets very tough and then she's not able to be a good mother or take on the role of a father."

She also revealed the severe depression she experienced after her third pregnancy, a struggle that society largely ignores, occasionally shamed and dismissed as insignificant. "I think the education that there is such a thing as depression - as postpartum depression - and hormonal imbalances," she noted, emphasizing the need for greater understanding of now people are getting mental health issues.
