Top Hamas Official Open To Hostage Deal Talks Without Permanent Ceasefire

Gaza: A Hamas official said Sunday the Palestinian group was ready to discuss a hostage release deal with Israel even without a "complete" ceasefire.

The apparent easing of Hamas's position comes as long-stalled diplomatic efforts to secure a ceasefire and hostage release have gathered pace with a new proposal and meetings hosted by Qatari and Egyptian mediators.

"Hamas had previously required that Israel agree to a complete and permanent ceasefire," the top official told AFP as the war entered its 10th month.

But mediators have offered assurances "that as long as the... negotiations continued, the ceasefire would continue," said the official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Israel, which vowed to destroy Hamas in response to the group's October 7 attack that sparked the war, has repeatedly rejected demands for a permanent ceasefire.

US President Joe Biden announced a plan in late May that included an initial six-week truce and the exchange of hostages held by Hamas for Palestinian prisoners held in Israel.

Talks quickly stalled but a US official said Thursday that a new text from Hamas

"moves the process forward and may provide the basis for closing the deal."

Egypt's state-linked Al-Qahera News said late Saturday that Cairo was "hosting Israeli and American delegations" and mediators were in contact with Hamas amid "intensive Egyptian meetings this week with all parties." In Israel, anti-government protesters demanding a hostage release deal blocked roads in the commercial hub of Tel Aviv on a nationwide "disruption day" from 6:29 am, the time Hamas launched their attack on October 7. Data scientist Yoni Peleg, 34, said protesters were crying "out for help."

to end the war" and pressure Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's government to secure the release of the remaining hostages. Hamas's unprecedented October 7 attack on southern Israel resulted in the deaths of 1,195 people, mostly civilians, according to an AFP tally and may provide the basis for closing the deal. Hamas seized 251 hostages, 116 of whom remain in Gaza, including 42 military says are dead. Israel has carried out a military offensive that has killed at least 38,153 people in Gaza, also mostly civilians, according to data from the health ministry in the Hamas-run territory. Israel has said it would send a delegation to continue talks with Qatari mediators, though a government spokesman said Friday there were still "gaps" with Hamas. An official with knowledge of the mediation said US Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) director William Burns would also go to Qatar this week. If negotiations start, Hamas expects them to take between two to three weeks, according to the official from the Islamist movement.—RT/Agency

By Khuda Bux Brohi

THATTA: In response to the escalating water demand in Karachi, the Sindh government is moving forward with plans to significantly expand the storage capacity of Keenjhar Lake, located in Thatta district. This initiative is critical for the Greater Karachi Bulk Water Supply Scheme (K-IV project), which aims to increase Karachi's water supply by 650 million gallons per day (MGD).

Phase-1, it can supply an additional 260 MGD of water. However, the lake's current capacity is insufficient for the planned second and third phases of the K-IV project, necessitating an expansion to support the increased storage requirements. Syed Salahuddin Ahmed, CEO of Karachi Water and Sewerage Corporation, emphasized the urgent need for this expansion. He noted that Karachi's current daily water supply is 650 MGD, significantly below the city's actual requirement of over 1,200 MGD.

The Sindh irrigation department has developed a comprehensive proposal to enhance Keenjhar Lake's storage capabilities, which has been submitted to Chief Minister Syed Murad Ali Shah for approval and funding. The project, estimated to cost approximately $300 million, has attracted interest from the World Bank for financial backing. Currently, Keenjhar Lake is a vital water source for both Thatta district and Karachi. Upon the completion of the K-IV project's tem and the development of comprehensive social and environmental strategies. The World Bank has expressed its support for the project. In addition to discussing the Keenjhar Lake expansion, Shah and the World Bank team deliberated on a $200 million initiative to modernize the Right Bank canals of the Sukkur Barrage, currently under feasibility review as part of the Sindh Water Agriculture Transformation Project (SWAT). They also explored the broader 10-year Country Partnership Framework (CPF) for 2025-34. This framework aims to tackle critical issues such as child stunting, learning poverty, climate resilience, economic decarbonization, and inclusive job creation. Ending the cycle of poverty and violence against children in Pakistan

In recent news that shocks the conscience, two incidents from Naushehro Feroze and Lahore vividly underscore the harrowing reality faced by children across Pakistan. In Naushehro Feroze, a father resorted to burying his 15-day-old daughter alive, driven by desperation due to financial constraints that prevented him from affording her medical treatment. This act of unimaginable cruelty reflects not only an individual's despair but also a broader societal failure to protect the most vulnerable. Similarly distressing is the case from Lahore, where a 13-year-old domestic worker named Tehreem was subjected to brutal torture by her employers, allegedly over suspicions of theft. The incident, where the child was stripped naked and suffered broken bones, paints a chilling picture of abuse and exploitation.

These incidents are not isolated; they are symptomatic of a deeper crisis of poverty and disconnect between the ruling elites and the masses in Pakistan. The gap between those in power, who often exhibit apathy towards the struggles of ordinary citizens, and the populace struggling to survive, has widened to a breaking point. For children like Tayyab's daughter and Tehreem, this disconnect translates into a dire lack of protection and support. To end this cycle of poverty and violence against children, immediate and concerted action is imperative. It starts with addressing the root causes: poverty alleviation measures that provide economic security to families, robust social welfare programs that ensure access to healthcare and education, and stringent enforcement of child protection laws. Moreover, it demands a shift in societal attitudes towards empathy and responsibility, where every child is seen as deserving of dignity and protection.

The tragedies in Naushehro Feroze and Lahore should serve as a wake-up call. They remind us that the safety and well-being of our children must be a top priority, not an afterthought. It is time for Pakistan's leadership to bridge the gap, to listen to the cries of its people, and to act decisively to ensure that no child suffers such atrocities again.

-Might as well declare Trump the next President from now!

Sleepy Joe Biden returns to campaign trail amid calls to end White House re-election bid WASHINGTON: US President Joe Biden heads back out on the campaign trail on Sunday, desperate to salvage his re-election bid as senior Democrats meet to discuss growing calls that he quit the White House race.

The 81-year-old Democrat kicks off a gruelling week with two campaign rallies in the battleground state of Pennsylvania, before hosting the NATO leaders' summit in Washington.

He will do so under an increasingly unforgiving spotlight, as pressure mounts for him to drop out after his disastrous debate against Donald Trump last month ignited panic over his age and fitness to serve another four years. Biden has remained defiant, unequivocally declaring - at a rally, to reporters and on social media - that he is fit to serve, the only one who can defeat Trump, and stay in the race.

"I beat Trump in 2020. I'm going to beat him again in 2024," his campaign social media account posted on Saturday. But a televised interview with ABC News on Friday has failed to quell concerns. His next major test in the public eye will be a press conference scheduled for Thursday, during the NATO summit.

So far, five Democratic lawmakers have called on Biden to drop out, with the drumbeat of dissent slowly rising.

The House minority leader, Hakeem Jeffries, has scheduled a virtual meeting of senior Democrat representatives for Sunday to discuss the best way forward, and Democrat Senator Mark Warner is reportedly working to convene a similar forum in the upper chamber. Meanwhile, for Biden and his campaign team, the strategy seems to be to ride it out. The campaign has unveiled an intense battle plan for July, including an avalanche of TV spots and trips to all the key states. That includes a visit to the southwest of the country during the Republican convention from July 15-18, at which Trump is set to be anointed the party's official presidential nominee.

In what had been billed as a make-or-break interview with ABC News on Friday, Biden flatly dismissed the falling poll numbers and concerns over his mental and physical fitness triggered by his dismal June 27 performance against Trump. He blamed the Russian strongman Vladimir Putin, and insisted he could bring about a quick end to the fighting in Ukraine, where the Russian invasion is now in its third year. For now, Democrat heavyweights are largely keeping a lid on any simmering discontent with their leader - at least in public. But with election day just four months away, any move to replace Biden as the nominee would need to be made sooner rather than later, and the party will be scrutinized for any signs of more open rebellion. Meanwhile, the local authorities are committed to ensuring that the case is thoroughly investigated, with stringent measures taken against those responsible for such heart-breaking incidents. —RT

Setharja Resident Demands Justice Over Police Inaction And Threats

By Azhar Kubar

SETHARJA: Ghulam Rasool, a resident of Setharja, has staged a protest demonstration against the local police, alleging gross misconduct and a failure to deliver justice. The protest was prompted by a disturbing incident involving Rasool's 7-year-old daughter, Rukhsar, who was bitten by a dog belonging to Ghulam Shabir Ansari. Rasool himself had also been attacked by the same dog just a few days earlier. Rasool recounted his ordeal, explaining that when he went to the police to lodge a complaint about the dog attacks, instead of taking his concerns seriously, the police registered a case of a clash against him. This unexpected turn of events has left Rasool and his family feeling vulnerable and betrayed by those who are supposed to protect them.

Adding to his distress, Rasool claimed that influential local figures, allegedly in cahoots with the police, have been issuing dire threats to him and his family. These threats have intensified Rasool's fears for their safety, prompting his public plea for justice. During the protest, Rasool called on the concerned authorities to take immediate action, investigate the matter thoroughly, and provide the justice he and his family deserve.

The incident has raised significant concerns about the influence of powerful individuals over local law enforcement and the urgent need for accountability and protection for ordinary citizens. As the situation develops, the community and observers await a response from the concerned authorities, hoping for a resolution that ensures the safety and rights of Ghulam Rasool and his family.

Stuart Broad hails 'bowling addict' James Anderson ahead of final Test

LONDON: Former England pacer Stuart Broad has praised his long-time bowling partner James Anderson as "an addict of the art of bowling" as the veteran fast bowler prepares for his final Test against West Indies.

Anderson, 42 later this month, will face the West Indies in a series opener at Lord's starting on Wednesday before ending an England career which has so far yielded 700 wickets in 187 Tests - both records among quick bowlers.

Broad, who played alongside James Anderson in 138 of those games before retiring from Test cricket after last year's Ashes, said his longstanding new-ball partner's excellence was down to a sheer love of bowling.

"He loves the rhythm of running into bowl, the control of the technique of his action, the tactical side of whether he's bowling away swing, inswing, wobble seam," Broad wrote in the Sunday Times.

"When you talk about professionals who have had longevity, you often talk about their dedication to training, their discipline in the gym and their diet."

The 38-year-old Broad, who himself took 604 wickets in 167 Tests, added: "And of course, you don't play to 42 unless you have that but the thing that makes him different is his genuine love of the art of what he does."

"Addict is generally used as a negative word but I'd say he is an addict of the art of bowling."

Anderson's reputation was based on his ability as an outstanding conventional swing bowler, particularly in home conditions, but Broad said this ignored his skill in deploying reverse swing.

"He doesn't get enough credit for his reverse swing, which has been crucial to his great record in the subcontinent," Stuart Broad wrote. "Because his line and length are so immaculate it makes it lethal.—Agency

Jongwe reveals reason behind 'shoe celebration' after Zimbabwe's win over India Zimbabwe caused a major upset at Harare Sports Club, successfully defending a modest target of 116 against a youthful Indian team captained by Shubman Gill.

The Indian batsmen struggled to apply themselves, losing half their side by the 10th over, with Dhruv Jurel falling victim to Luke Jongwe on his T20I debut.

Jongwe's distinctive 'shoe celebration' after taking the wicket stemmed from a playful pre-match conversation with his girlfriend Brenda Jasi.

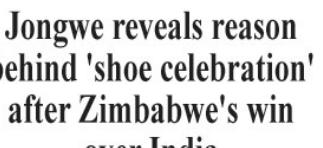

"I came up with the idea for the celebration while I was on a call with my girlfriend Brenda. We were discussing a celebration I would do if I got a wicket, so I went with the shoe celebration. I told her each time I got a wicket, I would be calling her the room for improvement," Jongwe explained.

Zimbabwe's captain, Sikandar Raza, expressed delight at his team's victory while acknowledging the ongoing challenge posed by an inexperienced Indian lineup.

"Feel really happy about the win. Need to take one game at a time. The job is not done, series is not over. World champions play like world champions, so we need to be ready for the next game," Raza said.

Raza also highlighted the team's focus and determination.

"This isn't a wicket where you get bowled out for 115. Credit to the bowlers of both sides. Clearly an indication we need to up our skills. Our catching and ground fielding was amazing, but we did make some errors, showing there's room for improvement," Jongwe explained.

Seifert's 82 trumps Hasaranga's fifty as Galle Marvels beat Kandy Falcons

DAMBULLA: Wanindu Hasaranga's explosive half-century went in vain as Tim Seifert played a modest 82-run knock to help Galle Marvels defeat Kandy Falcons in the ninth match of the Lanka Premier League (LPL) 2024 at Rangiri Dambulla International Stadium on Sunday.

Set to chase 176, Galle Marvels steered to victory in 17.1 overs with a loss of four wickets courtesy of Seifert's unbeaten half-century.

Niroshan Dickwella set the tone with three boundaries in the first over, however, he fell on the last ball of the over.

Alex Hales was joined by Seifert and together they attacked the Falcons' bowlers, constructing a 79-run stand for the second wicket in just 34 balls.

Hasaranga broke the partnership in the seventh over when he enticed Hales to attempt a slog sweep, only to get caught by Pavan Rathnayake at deep mid-wicket.

Hales played a quick 38-run cameo off 19 balls with four boundaries and three sixes.

Seifert continued his onslaught as he got involved in a brief 38-run partnership with Bhanuka Rajapaksa (16) before Niroshan Dickwella invited Kandy Falcons to bat first and the bowlers proved the decision right by taking four wickets in quick succession with 32 runs on the board.—Agency

GLOBAL WATCH

US Election 2024: NATO allies concerned over Sleepy Joe Biden's ability to beat Trump

As the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation's (NATO) summit is just around the corner, diplomats and world leaders are expressing concerns about US President Joe Biden's age and health.

To defeat Donald Trump in the November 5 election, Biden is required to prove that he's ready and strong at the summit, which will be held in Washington next week.

According to Politico, allies want Biden to compete for his second term against Trump, but they are concerned about his ability to defeat the former president in the forthcoming elections.

Following the 81-year-old's poor performance in the first presidential debate against the Republican, some European officials have voiced doubts about Biden's stamina and leadership capabilities.

"It doesn't take a genius to see that the president is old. We're not sure that, even if he wins, he can survive four years more," one of the officials of the European NATO stated.

Another EU official remarked: "We all want Biden to have a second term to avoid dealing with Trump again, but this isn't really reassuring."

Moreover, NATO allies are concerned about how long Biden can keep US support for European defence, since Trump is sceptical about extending support for other countries.

"We're having more conversations about our own defences since it looks like Trump is coming back," an official from one NATO country said after the debate. —Agency

"Need Plan To Control Immigration": Ex UK PM Tony Blair's Advice To Keir Starmer

London: Former Labour prime minister Tony Blair made an early intervention in British politics on Sunday after Keir Starmer's landslide election victory, urging him to have a "plan to control immigration".

Blair warned Starmer, who is beginning his second full day as prime minister with a visit to Scotland, that the anti-immigration Reform UK Party also posed a challenge to Labour, not just the Conservative Party.

The Reform UK party, led by Brexit firebrand Nigel Farage, maximised the damage to the Conservatives at the election by splitting the right-wing vote.

It won five seats in the Westminster parliament and 14 percent of the vote, prompting Farage to warn that it will target Labour voters next.

In a piece headlined "My advice to Keir Starmer", Blair wrote in the Sunday Times that "all over the western world, traditional political parties are suffering disruption".

"Where the system allows new entrants to emerge, they are running riot everywhere. Look at France or Italy. We need a plan to control immigration. If we don't have rules, we get prejudices," he added.

Blair, the only Labour leader to lead his party to three consecutive election victories starting with his own landslide win in 1997, couched his "advice" in an article about harnessing the power of artificial intelligence (AI).

He said he believed digital ID technology offered the best solution to controlling irregular immigration, a key issue on the doorstep during the election campaign.

"We should move as the world is moving to digital ID. If not, new border controls will have to be highly effective," he wrote.

Other suggestions included "a tough new approach to law and order" due to the fact that "at present criminal elements are modernising faster than law enforcement".

And he said the government should "avoid any vulnerability on 'wokeism'", warning against policies that many regard as overly politically correct. —Agency

Overnight Ukraine Drone Hit Sets Russian Munitions Depot Ablaze

Moscow: An overnight Ukrainian drone attack set a Russian munitions depot ablaze the Voronezh region, near the two countries' shared border, Russian and Ukrainian officials said Sunday.

"Several drones were detected and destroyed overnight by air defence systems above the Voronezh region," regional governor Alexander Gusev wrote on Telegram.

"Their falling debris set off a fire in a depot" in the Podgorenskiy district, about 80 kilometres (50 miles) from the Ukrainian border.

"Explosives began to detonate", Gusev said, adding that there were no indications anybody had been hurt.

Rescue teams were at the scene and Gusev said local people living near the depot were being evacuated.

A Ukrainian defence source told AFP that its drones hit the munitions factory in an overnight attack.

"The enemy stored surface-to-surface and surface-to-air missiles, shells for tanks and artillery and boxes of ammunition" at the site, which was hit by drones resulting in a "powerful" explosion, the source said. Russia and Ukraine have used drones, including large explosive devices with a range of hundreds of kilometres (miles), extensively since Russia launched its military offensive in February 2022. Ukraine has stepped up its attacks on Russian territory this year, targeting both energy sites it says supply the Russian army and towns and villages just across the border. —Agency

Israeli Strike On School Sheltering Displaced Gazans Kills 4, Second Attack In 2 Days

Gaza: The civil defence agency in Hamas-run Gaza said a strike Sunday on a school sheltering displaced Palestinians killed at least four people, the second such Israeli attack in two days.

The Israeli military, which has long accused Palestinian operatives of using schools and other civilian infrastructure, confirmed the strike "in the area of the school" in Gaza City. It said in a statement the school complex was used as a hideout and housed "a Hamas weapons manufacturing facility".

The civil defence agency said Ihab al-Ghusaini, the Hamas government's deputy labour minister, was among those killed in the strike on the Holy Family school. The strike came a day after a UN-run school in the central Nuseirat refugee camp was hit, in an attack that the Gaza health ministry said killed 16 people and drew condemnation from the United Nations. Israel said militants were hiding there. —Agency

Rupee Depreciation Expected By End of 2024 Despite IMF Bailout Prospects

KARACHI: The Pakistani rupee, which is currently being exchanged at Rs278 against the dollar, is expected to depreciate to Rs 295 by the end of December 2024 despite the government's hope of securing a new bailout package from the International Monetary Fund (IMF), media reported on Sunday.

"As Pakistan navigates these turbulent waters, we expect economic challenges to persist in the near term with elevated inflation and demand contraction," said Tresmark in a client note issued a day earlier.

The prediction comes after Minister of State for Finance Ali Pervaiz Malik's remarks claiming that the government was looking forward to an IMF bailout in excess of $6 billion after addressing all of the lender's requirements in its tax-heavy budget.

In the budget, the government increased the taxes on the already burdened salaried class, brought exporters into the normal tax regime, increased the petroleum levy and imposed new taxes on the real estate sectors, among others, to increase revenue generation aimed at stabilising the country's economic indicators.

"We hope to culminate this [IMF] process in the next three to four weeks," Malik told Reuters.

This week, the rupee traded within narrow ranges due to balanced supply and demand dynamics for dollars in the market and saw slight fluctuations throughout the week before recovering losses to close at Rs278.37 on Friday.

Elaborating on the performance of the local currency, Tresmark's note said that the rupee is projected to trade at Rs295 against the dollar by this year's end and at Rs325 by June 2025.

Positive indicators such as a narrowing trade deficit and a resilient stock market suggest a gradual economic recovery and an expected IMF agreement, anticipated to bring in between $6 billion to $8 billion, is seen as crucial for stabilising the economy, Tresmark noted.

However, potential implications from the Finance Bill's tax measures and escalating fuel prices may further strain purchasing power and demand, the report cautioned.

On the policy rate issue, it said that it is anticipated to remain between 17 to 19% by December 2024 to counter growth-related inflationary pressures.

Meanwhile, Sakib Sherani, an economist who heads the private firm Macro Economic Insights, is of the view that a quick deal with the IMF was needed to avoid pressure on the country's foreign exchange reserves and the currency due to maturing debt repayments and the effects of unwinding of capital and import controls that were applied earlier. —RT/Agency

The senior police officer, who was a close friend of another martyred officer senior superintendent police (SSP) Chaudhry Aslam, was targeted by two gunmen near a residential building in the area.

Ali received a bullet in the head following the heavy firing by the culprits and was immediately taken to the Abbasi Shaheed Hospital where he succumbed to his injuries during treatment.

A security guard of the residential building also lost his life in the fierce gun attack.

Police officers confirmed that one of the armed men donned an ajrak — a traditional block-printed shawl in Sindh — while the second gunman hid his face with a helmet. The attacker used a 9mm pistol with a silencer to target the senior cop, they added.

They said that Ali frequently used to visit the area to meet his childhood friends which increased suspicions that the assassins carried out the attack after full revenge.

The police personnel also found 11 spent bullet casings of a 9mm pistol from the crime scene. The attackers opened fire at DSP Ali after he came out of his "bullet-proof vehicle". CTD Deputy Inspector General (DIG) Asif Aijaz Shaikh while speaking to journalists following Ali's killing today said that the culprits behind the attack would

Protest Resolved As Police Agree To Judicial Probe Into Woman's Death From Karachi Police Firing

KARACHI: The hours-long sit-in at Karachi's National Highway to protest the death of a woman allegedly by police's firing in Steel Town last week was called off on Sunday after the latest episode of talks with the law enforcers.

Area locals and the victim's family staged a sit-in at the National Highway - where a woman was shot dead in what police said was "collateral damage" during a purported encounter with an officer (SHO) for leading the encounter that left the woman dead.

However, police claimed that the said SHO was not engaged in the cross-firing as he was present at the police station at the time of the encounter. They said that the police party was chasing the criminals when the woman was caught in the line of fire.

The bereaved family had been seeking the registration of a first information report (FIR) against the Steel Town

Police Station's station house officer (SHO) for leading the encounter that left the woman dead.

Meanwhile, the victim's brother stressed that SHO should be booked as the police party couldn't engage in an encounter with criminals without the former's consent. However, the family ended the protest following talks led by East Deputy Inspector General (DIG) Ghulam Azfar Mahesar, saying that they "left the matter to Allah".—RT/Agency

New Poll Shows Biden Leading Trump In Key Battleground States Ahead Of 2024 Election

WASHINGTON: President Joe Biden is ahead of former president Donald Trump in two key battlegrounds — Michigan and Wisconsin — however, he faces challenges in swing states and trails behind his nemesis in Pennsylvania, a new poll showed, mostly due to his debate debacle.

On the night of June 27, Biden and Trump locked horns in the first presidential debate of the 2024 election cycle, which left America shell-shocked.

Political analysts attributed the surprise not to the latter's falsehoods and personal attacks but to the former's complete failure to grasp the situation.

Biden's doddering performance against the main Republican candidate in the debate could potentially end his campaign just four months before the election.

Desperately, the incumbent US president is now urging voters to consider his 3½-year record of achievements in office rather than dwelling on his 90-minute debate debacle.

In Michigan, Biden has 48% of the vote compared to Trump's 43%, while in Wisconsin, the 81-year-old is leading with 47% of the vote compared to Trump's 44%.

Nevertheless, the Democrat is behind Trump in Pennsylvania, a state where Biden grew up and expected a lot of support. The Republican is leading with 51% of the vote there, while Biden has 44%.

Additionally, he's trailing in other swing states as well, like Arizona, Georgia, Nevada, and North Carolina, but the difference is small and within the poll's margin of error.

As per the poll conducted by Bloomberg News between July 1 and July 5, there are 4,902 voters in the seven swing states, with a one percentage point margin of error.

This poll comes following Biden's poor performance in the presidential debate, which raised concerns about his age and his capability of serving as president for another term.

Around half of the people surveyed said Trump won the debate, with only 13% believing Biden had.

Some Democrats are reportedly considering urging Biden to withdraw from the race. The president, however, has stated publicly that he remains committed to running for re-election.

Speaking to ABC on Friday, Biden called his debate performance a "bad episode" and further added that there were no serious concerns about his health. He also mentioned that "most of the Democratic Party still supports him."

To the dismay of the entire America, the commander-in-chief wobbled on the debate stage, murmuring, muttering, and frequently fading out as if in a

Between speaking, he stood quietly hunched over, with his mouth occasionally wide open and his eyes switching between confusion and clarity.

Even after 90 minutes, he seemed to have the same demeanour as when he entered, as his wife gently escorted him offstage, holding his hand.

However, in households across the country, this worst showing on the part of President Biden, triggered off some serious existential questions. The octogenarian inadvertently became the poster child for many families' ageing and sometimes infirm relatives — showing how inherently fragile the human life is.

For many Americans, it was a heartbreaking portrayal of a man deep in the twilight of his otherwise eventful life.—RT/Agency

UNHCR Chief Begins Pakistan Visit, Meets Afghan Refugees In Peshawar

PESHAWAR: UN refugee agency chief Filippo Grandi on Sunday met Afghan refugees and asylum seekers in Peshawar as he began a three-day visit that will focus on the problems of Afghan refugees, a UNHCR spokesperson said.

Spokesperson Qaisar Afridi told media that Grandi, the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), met delegations of Afghan refugees who apprised him about their problems in Pakistan.

"The UNHCR chief assured Afghan refugees that he would discuss with Pakistani officials about all issues of the refugees," the spokesperson said.

According to Afridi, the Afghan delegation comprised registered refugees and those who arrived in Pakistan after the Taliban takeover in August 2021.

The UNHCR chief also met Minister for States and Frontier Regions (SAFRON) Amir Muqam in Peshawar, the minister's of-ice in Islamabad said. SAFRON ministry also deals with Afghan refugees. "Pakistan has been hosting Afghan refugees for 40 years despite serious economic difficulties," an official statement quoted the SAFRON minister as telling Grandi. This is the first visit of the UNHCR chief to Pakistan after the country announced a repatriation plan for "illegal foreigners" in October last year. Taliban rulers in Afghanistan had angrily reacted to Pakistan's decision to expel what Pakistan call illegal Afghans and called for a halt to the operation.

According to an estimate nearly 500,000 Afghans, who did not have legal documents, have been repatriated to Afghanistan since November 1, 2023. Officials had earlier stated that about 1.7 million illegal Afghans are living in Pakistan. "The refugee issue is becoming complicated across the world. Conflicts are leading to refugee issues and attention must be paid to resolve conflicts," Minister Muqam told the UNHCR chief. Grandi-led UNHCR delegation praised Pakistan for taking care of Afghan refugees for a long time, the statement further said.—RT/Agency

UN Reports Lack Of Safe Havens For Palestinian Families In Gaza City

UNITED NATION: The UN agency for Palestinian refugees (UNRWA) said families in the Gaza Strip are facing dire circumstances with nowhere safe to seek refuge.

"Palestinian families in the Gaza Strip have nowhere safe to go," said UNRWA on X.

The agency also quoted its spokeswoman in Gaza, Louise Wateridge, in an interview with The New York Times, saying: "It's an endless cycle of death and displacement."

"People express here that they are losing hope, they are losing the willpower, faced with another forced displacement and absolutely no certainty of safety," Wateridge said.

"In terms of people's ability to move, it's been eight months of war, people are extremely fatigued, they're exhausted, they're malnourished."

She said "people are a lot weaker, there are more injuries, there's been less medicine available, less fresh fruit, less water."

Israeli army spokesman Avichay Adraee on Monday called for the evacuation of Palestinians from areas east of Khan Younis, forcing them to flee towards al-Mawasi area in Rafah.

Israel has continued brutal offensive on Gaza since an Oct. 7, 2023 attack by the Palestinian group Hamas.

More than 38,000 Palestinians in Gaza have since been killed, mostly women and children, and vast tracts of the territory lie in ruins amid a crippling blockade of food, clean water and medicine.

Israel also stands accused of genocide at the International Court of Justice, whose latest ruling ordered it to immediately halt its military operation in the southern city of Rafah, where over a million Palestinians had sought refuge from the war before it was invaded on May 6.—RT/Agency
