Jaishankar arrived at the Noor Khan Airbase on Tuesday to attend the Shanghai Cooperation Organisation (SCO) summit being held here on Tuesday and Wednesday. Bilawal Calls For Unprecedented Pak-India Collaboration On Climate And Terror

ISLAMABAD: Pakistan People's Party (PPP) chairman Bilawal Bhutto Zardari on Tuesday expressed hope that India's External Affairs Minister Subrahmanyam Jaishankar will not only engage with Pakistani media alongside SCO Summit in Islamabad, but the two countries will eventually engage on pressing common issues like climate change and terrorism prevention. In an exclusive media talk with media, Bilawal Bhutto maintained that both India and Pakistan should learn from the success of Shanghai Cooperation Organisation (SCO) as the inherent multilateralism helps all the member countries deal with vital issues rather than engaging on bilateral differences. "A conversation is necessary, whether today or tomorrow, both countries have their opinions on differences but why should we forget that Pakistan and India are the two most stressed countries due to climate change. Terrorism is also a reality, whether they (India) blame us (Pakistan) and we blame RAW (India's intelligence agency) but the issue exists, so if we engage, we will somehow reach a common point and save precious Indian and Pakistani lives," said Bilawal Bhutto Zardari. The PPP chairman said that the future of both the countries will not be decided by us if we do not engage on issues like climate change. Bilawal Bhutto also expressed hope that the Indian MEA will not shy away from talking to Pakistani media and answer their questions like he (Bilawal) did while he visited India in 2023 for SCO Summit, adding that the Indian minister may raise terrorism allegations on Pakistan that suit the Indian narrative during this multilateral summit like SCO but Pakistan, being the host will not respond to make this issue-driven meeting a success.—RT/Agency

Gohar Confirms Imran In Good Spirits After Health Check-Up

ISLAMABAD: After a team of doctors from the Pakistan Institute of Medical Sciences (PIMS) visited Adiala Jail, Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf (PTI) Chairman Barrister Gohar Ali Khan on Tuesday shared an update on incarcerated party founder Imran Khan's health, saying, "Khan Saab is in good health and had exercised for an hour today." Gohar's statement came after his party deferred its protest at Islamabad's D-Chowk on the SCO summit's inaugural day after the Interior Minister Mohsin Naqvi assured the party that a team of doctors would examine the PTI founder's health at the Rawalpindi central jail. The PTI chairman confirmed that two doctors — an ENT specialist and a medical specialist — visited Khan at Adiala Jail at 4pm today. "We were informed a while ago that Alhamdulillah, Khan Saab is in good health and had exercised for an hour today," he said in a message on X, adding, "We shall get medical reports from them soon and I will share with you, InshaAllah." He also expressed gratitude to the PTI workers and supporters who were concerned about the party founder's health. A day ago, Gohar had announced his party's political committee's decision to put off its Islamabad protest scheduled for October 15 in view of the SCO summit kicked off in Islamabad earlier today. Prior to accepting the government's proposal, the party sought permission for a meeting between Khan, his sisters and doctors at the jail, however, Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif's administration turned down the request. It was also learnt via sources that a team of PIMS' doctors would visit Adiala Jail to examine the former prime minister. Additionally, Khan's private physician would also be permitted to meet him, the sources added. However, Khan's personal physician Dr Asim Yusuf was not allowed to meet him despite he waited outside the jail for more than an hour and also submitted his credentials to the security staff. However, he returned from jail after not being permitted to meet the PTI founder. Dr Asim said that the authorities were told that the authorities would allow PIMS' doctors to conduct the former prime minister's medical examination.—RT/Agency

Nationwide Protests Loom As Lawyers Rally Against Constitutional Reforms

ISLAMABAD: Lawyers across Pakistan have come together on a unified platform to oppose proposed constitutional amendments, warning of a nationwide movement if the government proceeds with the changes. At a convention held by the Karachi Bar Association at City Court on Tuesday, prominent legal figures, including officials from the Pakistan Bar Council, Supreme Court Bar Association, and other regional associations, gathered to voice their concerns. Attendees included Munir A. Malik, Hamid Khan, and Abid Zuberi, among others. However, no representatives from the Sindh High Court Bar Association attended the event. The proposed amendments were denounced as unconstitutional and illegal, with lawyers threatening a countrywide protest in response. Peshawar High Court Bar President Fida Gul expressed his determination to prevent any changes. "We will not allow these amendments to happen. The government's unconstitutional tactics will be met with resistance," he stated, adding that the creation of a constitutional court would divide the judiciary. "We will fight to the end against such amendments." Asad Manzoor Butt, President of the Lahore High Court Bar, criticised the government's plans to establish constitutional courts at both federal and provincial levels, and also condemned extending the age limit of the Chief Justice of Pakistan. "The entire legal fraternity is ready for a nationwide movement," Butt warned. There was tension at the convention when members of the People's Lawyers Forum protested the event. The convention organisers emphasised that the meeting was held for the benefit of lawyers, not to serve any political agenda. Former federal law minister Shahida Jamil advised caution, stating, "Everyone has their version of the amendments, but we must tread carefully. What happens if there's a clash between the constitutional court and the Supreme Court?" Lawyers agreed that the government's secretive approach to these amendments would not be tolerated, with calls for transparency in the legislative process.—RT/Agency

Imran Khan's Health Must Not Be a Political Bargaining Chip!

The health and well-being of incarcerated individuals, regardless of their status, is a basic human right that must be upheld by the state. This principle is particularly crucial when it involves a popular political figure like Imran Khan, whose every move impacts millions. While recent reports suggest that Khan is in good health, the refusal to allow his personal physician access to him raises serious concerns.

Despite assurances, Khan's private doctor, Dr. Asim Yusuf, was denied a meeting with his patient, even after waiting for over an hour outside Adiala Jail. Such actions send a troubling message about how the state perceives its responsibility towards those in its custody. Denying any prisoner proper medical care is inexcusable, but when the person in question is a leader of Khan's stature, it risks sparking wider unrest. Millions of his supporters are closely watching how he is treated, and any perception of neglect or mistreatment could lead to nationwide instability. The government must understand that ensuring Khan's well-being is not merely about his health; it is about maintaining the country's political equilibrium. Denial of his basic rights could fan the flames of unrest among his followers, jeopardizing peace at a time when Pakistan is already navigating complex political waters. If there's one thing Pakistan cannot afford, it is to allow the health of a national leader to become a political tool. It's time for the authorities to act responsibly and make health care a priority, not just for Imran Khan but for every person behind bars.

Mbappe Hits Back Slams Swedish Media's Rape Allegations as 'Fake News'

Real Madrid star Kylian Mbappe said he was the victim of "fake news" after a Swedish newspaper reported that an investigation had been opened for rape following a visit by the French footballer's entourage to Stockholm.

Mbappe, 25, claimed in a post on X that there was a link between the report in the Aftonbladet tabloid and his hearing before a French league committee on Tuesday in his bitter dispute over unpaid wages with his former club Paris Saint-Germain (PSG).

"FAKE NEWS!!!! It's becoming so predictable, on the eve of the hearing, as if by chance," wrote Mbappe.

His entourage called the report a "slanderous rumour" and threatened to take legal action.

Mbappe claims he is owed $60 million by the Qatari-owned French champions.

The 2018 World Cup winner was not selected for France's Nations League fixtures last week, and spent Thursday and Friday in the Swedish capital where he dined at a restaurant with a group of people.

According to Aftonbladet's report, the French footballer then went to a nightclub, according to Aftonbladet's report.

The newspaper said a rape was committed "in Stockholm city centre", citing a formal complaint made to police on Saturday that it had seen.

Aftonbladet said the complaint was made after the alleged victim had sought medical attention but did not say who was named in the accusation.

"A probe is under way into a crime that was reported on October 10 in the centre of Stockholm," a prosecutor investigating the accusation told AFP.

Swedish police refused to give any further details.

"In general, if we have received a complaint and decided to conduct interviews and we make it known (to the public), those involved in the case may take actions that delay and complicate the investigation," said police spokeswoman Carina Skagerlind.

The Swedish newspaper published photos on its website on Monday showing police officers in front of the hotel where Mbappe and the group with him had stayed.

Mbappe's entourage said in a statement sent to AFP: "Today, a new slanderous rumour is starting to spread across the web from the Swedish media Aftonbladet. These accusations are completely false and irresponsible, and their propagation is unacceptable."

"In order to put an end to this methodical destruction of (the) image (of Kylian Mbappe), all necessary legal actions will be taken to re-establish the truth and pursue any person or media involved in the moral harassment and defamatory treatment that Kylian Mbappe is suffering repeatedly," the statement added.—Agency

Hairy Ramiz Raja Takes Aim: Blasts Babar Azam's Omission from Pakistan Test Squad

KARACHI: Former Pakistan Cricket Board (PCB) chairman Ramiz Raja has raised concerns over Babar Azam's omission from the Test squad during the ongoing series against England.

Raja criticised the decision, suggesting that it should have been Babar's choice to take a break rather than the selectors' decision to drop him entirely.

Speaking during a discussion on Sky Sports with former England cricketers Nasser Hussain and Michael Atherton, Raja highlighted the importance of allowing a player like Babar to make such decisions himself.

"There's always debate about whether Babar will fail or make a comeback, and that keeps things interesting. Right now, I don't see any sellable commodity in this Pakistan team, and the sponsors are wary because Pakistan have been losing and there are no real superstars playing.—Agency

According to a friend of Aniston who spoke to Radar Online, the actress has her dates at her huge Bel-Air mansion to maintain privacy.

"The pressure that comes with dating publicly is so intense, it can ruin a relationship before it gets off the ground," they added.

Brick Price Surge Sparks Outrage! Gambat Residents Cry Foul

By Hafeez Mallah

GAMBAT: In the Gambat taluka, brick suppliers have begun exploiting the public by arbitrarily increasing prices, leaving the poor unable to build homes. In small and large towns of Gambat, bricks suppliers have set their own rates. What used to cost 25,000 rupees for a truckload of hatching has now surged to 60,000 rupees, severely impacting those who were already displaced by flooding over the past two and a half years. This price gouging by suppliers is depriving the vulnerable population of their right to affordable housing. As a result, many poor workers cannot afford to rebuild their homes. Local activists have urged the Sindh government and particularly the Deputy Commissioner of Khairpur to take immediate action against these suppliers. They demand the establishment of a fixed price for a truckload of bricks at 25,000 rupees, enforcing this rate strictly to enable displaced individuals to rebuild their homes.
